Men's Transitional Housing (Post-treatment) Based on a peer support model within the houses with 24/7 access to professional support through our main facility, this housing is designed to help residential addiction treatment program graduates transition safely from treatment into the community. Residents would stay in these houses anywhere from 6 months to two years, working on their aftercare plans in a safe, sober and supported environment. Recovery Acres would help residents with things like job training, education, finding steady employment, securing appropriate ongoing mental health support as needed and eventually help the residents transition into permanent living situations.	Population: Men graduating from residential treatment programs with no safe place to live. Purpose: Transition clients safely from treatment into the community.	Approximately $400,000 per every 5 beds	None	We could add beds as soon as the Fall of 2019
Women's Transitional Housing (Post-treatment) Based on a peer support model within the houses with 24/7 access to professional support through our main facility, this housing would be designed to help women graduating from treatment programs or other supported programs into the community. Residents would stay in these houses anywhere from 6 months to two years, working on their aftercare plans in a safe, sober and supported environment. Recovery Acres would help residents with things like accessing ongoing trauma support, reconnecting with children/family, education, job training, finding steady employment, securing appropriate ongoing mental health support as needed and eventually help the residents transition into permanent living situations. Short-term Transitional Housing / non-medical detox (Pre-treatment)
Providing a 10 – 14 bed service for clients waiting to get into residential addiction treatment programs or residential mental health programs or supported housing programs in and around Edmonton. Residents would come from Alberta Health Services Detox, George Spady detox, out of corrections, or any other temporary situation they need to leave before they have a treatment bed. Clients would be housed, fed, supervised and supported in any way necessary to help them navigate the wait list times for treatment safely.	Population: Men and women on wait lists for addiction or mental health residential treatment programs or supported housing programs. Purpose: Help clients navigate wait list for treatment safely.	Approximately $800,000 for facility OR suitable facility provided through Alberta Infrastructure or AHS.	Approximately $600,000 annually for staff salaries, clients meals, and facility costs	We could start serving clients as early as the summer of 2018 depending on infrastructure readiness
Residential Treatment for women with children
Based on Recovery Acres' core program of Life Skills, Relapse Prevention and Addiction Awareness developed over the last 15 years we would provide accommodation, meals and 24/7 support to women with drug and alcohol addiction issue who still maintain custody of their children. That facility would not only provide support and counselling for the women, but also provide in-house child care for their kids. The women would have time during the day to attend programing and meet with counselors and do homework etc. while staff looked after the children. The facility and programing would be designed to accommodate different living arrangements and numbers and ages of children and staff would specialize in women's needs and provide access to community supports for them and their families.	Population: Women with children who need residential care to help them deal with drug and alcohol addiction. Purpose: Help clients achieve clean, healthy lifestyle and transition into the community to raise their children in a prosocial environment.	Unknown	Unknown	At least a year or two to design facility, secure funding, hire appropriate staff and develop appropriate program.
